CSC115: Computer Science I

Developing algorithms to solve problems and using the computer as a means to implement algorithms and to automate tasks. The course includes the study of a modern computer language along with the programming paradigms that it represents. Topics include variables, control structures, data structures, objects and reuse of code.
Credit Hour(s): 3
Department: Mathematics, Physics, and Computer Science
Semester Offered:
Fall
Spring