

PSY242: Adolescence and Adulthood

This course is designed as an overview of adolescent and adult development. Readings and class activities cover issues from adolescence through adulthood, examining research in physical, cognitive, personality, and social development. A particular emphasis of this course is an integration of biological, psychological, social, and cultural contributions to human development. This course satisfies an Area of Inquiry requirement for Social and Behavioral Sciences.

Credit Hour(s): 3

Department: Psychology

Semester Offered:

Spring

Area of Inquiry: Soc & Behav Sciences