

SOC390: Gender and Society

This course is designed to offer an explanation of the social construction of gender. The central themes of the course will be changes and continuities in gender roles within the United States, social processes that influence our lives and our gender identities, and the connections between gender, power, and inequality.

Credit Hour(s): 3

Department: Sociology

Semester Offered:

Spring (even)

Area of Inquiry: Soc & Behav Sciences