

SOC445: Social Research Methods

Social science research methods focus on issues of social and behavioral research design, covering such topics as the relationship between theory and research, the ethics of social science research, units of analysis, identification of variables and statement of hypotheses, sampling, measurement, and modes of social observation.

Credit Hour(s): 3

Department: Sociology