

CSC115: Computer Science I

Developing algorithms to solve problems and using the computer as a means to implement algorithms and to automate tasks. The course includes the study of a modern computer language along with the programming paradigms that it represents. Topics include variables, control structures, data structures, objects and reuse of code.

Credit Hour(s): 3

Department: Mathematics, Physics, and Computer Science

Semester Offered:

Fall

Spring