

ECO420: Labor Economics

This course uses empirical and theoretical models to examine the behavior of firms as the buyers of labor services, the behavior of households as the sellers of labor services, and the attempts of third parties (such as policy makers or unions) to influence outcomes in the market for labor services.

Credit Hour(s): 3

Prerequisites:

ECO223.

Department: Business and Economics

Semester Offered:

Spring (odd)