

PSY290: Animal Behavior

This course will examine the development, underlying neurology and physiology, adaptive function, and application of behavior to understanding feeding, habitat selection, communication, reproduction, parenting, and social behavior. Students will be exposed to methods for the design, analysis and interpretation of behavioral experiments.

Credit Hour(s): 3

Prerequisites:

PSY111.

Department: Psychology

Semester Offered:

Fall