

SOC405: Development and Globalization

This course is designed to introduce the student to how sociologists approach the study and practice of development. It explores cross-culturally how local populations have responded to development; the different topics of development, such as agriculture and rural development; and the ways sociological knowledge is applied in addressing development problems.

Credit Hour(s): 3

Prerequisites:

SOC111 or 118.

Program: Sociology

Semester Offered:

Spring (odd)