

SST450: Security Studies Seminar

This course aims to develop a working knowledge of the theories and conceptual frameworks that form the intellectual basis of security studies as an academic discipline. Students will write a seminar paper in which theoretical insights are systematically applied to a current security issue. NOTE: This course will be taught in an independent study format unless demand is sufficient to offer it during the semester.

Credit Hour(s): 3

Prerequisites:

Permission of the instructor.

Department: Political Science